DEFINITIONS AND EXPLANATIONS OF TERMS

TYPE of facility is listed to provide some of the information that may be needed by readers. The terms used reflect either programmatic support (which may affect scope of services and/or target populations) or traditional descriptions of facilities.

Community Health Centers (CHC)

Community Health Centers are funded by a federal grant program under Section 330 of the Public Health Service Act and administered by the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA) of the US Department of Health and Human Services. Community Health Centers provide comprehensive preventive, primary medical care, dental, and mental health services. Not all services are provided on-site; some may be provided through contract and referral systems. Community Health Centers are governed by a volunteer board of directors representative of the communities they serve, with a majority of board members who are users of the health center. Community Health Centers must provide services to everyone, regardless of ability to pay.

Community Health Center services are not free, but ensure that lack of income or insurance are not barriers to care. Patients who are not covered by insurance are eligible for discounted fees. Finally, Community Health Centers have a responsibility to focus upon the health concerns of their entire service area and not only the portion of the community that receives care in their clinics. Community Health Centers are responsible for working to increase access to healthcare within their service areas.

Information about the Community Health Center program is available from:

Community Health Aide Program

The Community Health Aide (CHA) Program developed in the 1950s in response to a number of health concerns including the tuberculosis epidemic, high infant mortality, and high rate of injuries in rural Alaska. In 1968, the CHA Program received formal recognition and congressional funding. The long history of cooperation and coordination between the federal and state governments and the Native tribal health organizations has facilitated improved health status in rural Alaska.

The CHA Program now consists of a network of approximately 500 Community Health Aides/Practitioners (CHA/Ps) in over 170 rural Alaska villages. Community Health Aides/Practitioners work within the guidelines of the Alaska Community Health Aide/Practitioner Manual, 1998 Revised Edition, which outlines assessment and treatment protocols. There is an established referral relationship, which includes mid-level providers, physicians, regional hospitals, and the Alaska Native Medical Center. In addition, providers such as public health nurses, physicians, and dentists make visits to villages to see clients in collaboration with the CHA/Ps.

Definitions and Explanations of Terms

The Alaska Area Native Health Service has the responsibility for provision of medical and health related services to Indian Health Service beneficiaries residing in Alaska. These services are provided by tribal organizations within the Alaska Native Health Care System. The village based CHA/Ps are a vital link in the delivery system.

Community Health Aides are selected by their communities to receive training. Training centers are located in Anchorage, Bethel, Nome, and Sitka. There are four sessions of CHA training, each of which lasts three to four weeks. Between sessions, the CHAs work in their clinics completing a skills list and practicum. Completion of the four session training curriculum and successful completion of a clinical skills preceptorship and examination, qualify the CHA as a Community Health Practitioner (CHP). CHA/Ps at any level of training may obtain certification by the Community Health Aide Program Certification Board.

The Community Health Aide Program model is currently being used as a template to develop programs in the areas of dental care, behavioral health, and elder care.

For more information on the Community Health Aide Program, please contact Victorie Heart at Alaska Native Tribal Health Consortium, 4000 Ambassador Drive, Room 419, Anchorage, Alaska 99508, phone 907-729-3642, fax 907-729-3629, e-mail: vheart@anmc.org. ### Public Health Nursing Clinics

State Government, Alaska Department of Health and Social Services, Division of Public Health, Section of Public Health Nursing operates public health centers and offices in twenty two communities throughout the state. These centers are staffed by public health nurses who provide community based service delivery for disease prevention, health promotion, and a variety of population-based services, as well as direct clinical preventive services to individuals and families. Public health nurses also provide services on an itinerant basis to more than 250 communities. Services include: prevention and control of infectious diseases through immunizations, testing, treatment, contact tracing, education and outreach; prevention and control of injuries and chronic diseases through education and reduction of health risks, referral and linking to needed services; outreach to families and children at medical and social risk; pregnancy testing and promotion of early prenatal care; public health emergency preparedness and response; and participation in community partnerships to address issues of health concern. There are charges for some services, with sliding fee scale for patients with limited income. No one is refused service due to inability to pay.

Local Government and Not-for-profit Public Health Nursing services are provided by the Municipality of Anchorage, Norton Sound Health Corporation, Maniilaq Health Services in Northwest Arctic Borough, and the North Slope Borough with grant support from the State of Alaska.

Hospitals and Nursing Homes

26 hospitals in Alaska provide a range of services including primarily inpatient care (medical, surgical, rehabilitation, long term acute care, psychiatric) and diverse outpatient services. ## Guide to the Frequency for Community Health Center Providers

Community and village health centers operated by Alaska's tribal health organizations provide health services to remote communities that otherwise would not receive services. While these sites frequently have Community Health Aides and Practitioners in residence, other medical providers — including doctors, dentists, mid-levels, and behavioral health practitioners — visit the communities on an itinerant basis. The following tables list community health centers organized by managing organization. Each table shows the type of service provided at each health center, and the frequency. The frequency key is as follows:

R=Resident: The provider lives in the community.

S=Seasonal: In some cases communities will have providers only through the busier summer months.

M=Monthly: On the average a provider visits each month.

Q=Quarterly: On the average the provider visits four times a year at regular intervals.

LQ=Less than Quarterly: On the average the provider visits less frequently that quarterly but more frequently than twice a year.

Y=Yearly: On the average the provider makes annual visits.

TY=Twice a year: On the average the provider will visit every six months.

V=Vacant: There is usually a practitioner at this level but the position is currently vacant.

AN=As Needed: A practitioner only visits the community when there is a specific need.
