

Brakes, Sherry L (HSS)

---

From: relay@mailin.fr on behalf of Hale Publishing, L.P. <books@halepublishing.com>
Sent: Wednesday, August 05, 2015 7:03 AM
To: Kent, Dana L (HSS)
Subject: Latching-On Newsletter - Safety of insect repellent sprays

If you are not able to see this mail, click here

From the Editor's Desk

In this month's edition:

New Research – New research published this past month on pregnancy, birth, breastfeeding, and more.

News Items of Interest – News reports on advice new moms are getting from physicians on infant care, Delaware is “banning the bags,” Target’s new breastfeeding policy, breastfeeding mothers have less thickening of their carotid artery wall in middle age, and Fenway Park has a lactation pod.

Medications in the News – Safety of insect repellent sprays

Tip of the Month – Celebrating World Breastfeeding Month

What's Going On – Upcoming webinars, meetings, conferences, observances, and information on World Breastfeeding Week.

Book of the Month - Just released! Perspectives in Lactation: Is Private Practice for Me? by Kathy Parkes, MSN-ED, BSPsy, RN, IBCLC, RLC, FILCA

Happy Reading!

Janet Rourke, Editor

Popular Articles

Safety of insect repellent sprays

Insect bites are certainly annoying, but they can also transmit disease. In the USA alone, insect bites can transmit Lyme disease, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, chikungunya, and dengue fever to name a few. Problems from these diseases produce

Perspectives in Lactation: Is Private Practice for Me?

By Kathy Parkes, MSN-ED, BSPsy, RN, IBCLC, RLC, FILCA

Are you an aspiring private practice lactation consultant or have you recently a significant burden on the health care system in the United States, even though insect bites might not be a part of everyone's outdoor experience. In other parts of the world, malaria, Chaga's disease, yellow fever, and many other diseases continue to be major killers. The species involved, specific diseases, and risk levels vary significantly by season and geography, but a few general principles still apply to assuring personal protection.

started a lactation consulting business? If so, this is the book for you! Author Kathy Parkes, MSN-ED, BSPsy, RN, IBCLC, RLC, FILCA, has successfully started and run two successful lactation consulting businesses. In this book, she shares her knowledge of everything you need to know to start a business. At the end of each chapter is a self-check. By the time you reach the end of the book, you've got enough information on the self-checks to write your business plan.

View Full Newsletter

If you wish to unsubscribe from our newsletter, click here

