A Medigap policy is a health insurance policy sold by private insurance companies. The legal name is a MEDICARE Supplement. Costs you pay for Medicare benefits – like coinsurance, copayments and deductibles – are called “gaps” in Medicare Parts A and B. You might want to buy a Medigap policy to help cover these gaps. Some Medigap policies also cover benefits that aren’t covered by Medicare, like emergency health care while traveling outside the United States. These are especially important in Alaska where our health care costs are high and where there is no managed care offering Medicare Advantage plans. Medigap provides a health insurance option for people with Medicare who have no spousal benefits, retiree or secondary health insurance.

You must be on Medicare Part A and Part B and be 65 years of age or older to get a Medigap plan. There are 10 different plans, however not all insurance companies are required to sell all the plans but they must sell Plan A if they offer any Medigap policy. The benefits in any Medigap plan are the same for every insurance company; however the costs for a policy may be different depending on the insurance company. You are shopping for COST. Once you are 65 or older and enrolled in Medicare Part B, the Medigap open enrollment period starts and cannot be changed. The Open enrollment period lasts for 6 months. If you delay enrolling in Medicare Part B because you or your spouse were working and you had group health coverage through an employer or union based on current active employment, your Open enrollment period begins when your Part B begins. You must buy a Medigap policy within 6 months during which time you have a guaranteed right to buy one. They cannot deny insurance for pre-existing conditions.

Before you buy any plan you should review your options to decide which plan best suits your circumstances. Then you should call several companies to check on their current prices. A list of all the companies selling Medigap insurance with their toll-free numbers is below. You should also ask them all the specifics of what is included in that particular plan, payment options, pricing increases and other concerns you might have.

People who are on Medicare and younger than 65 will find it difficult to purchase a Medicare Supplement Plan in Alaska. An alternative is health insurance though ACHIA, the Alaska Comprehensive Health Insurance Association. You can find information about this at https://www.achia.com/Default.asp or by calling 1-888-290-0616.
